At 6' 4", Brandon Molale is no stranger to standing out on the big screen. Brandon is best known from his scene-stealing performance as Kevin Ward, the obnoxious NY Jets quarterback in "Mr. Deeds" starring Adam Sandler and as Blazer in "Dodgeball: a True Underdog Story." Molale's good looks, athletic prowess and talent often get him cast in very physical roles. He has appeared in over 150 feature films and television shows. Brandon is involved with numerous national and local charities. Raised in Concord, California, Molale played football at Fresno State University where he graduated with a BA in Advertising and Marketing. It was in college that he started taking drama and acting classes. His football skills led him to performing football stunts in Adam Sandler's "The Waterboy". Brandon lives in Los Angeles with his family and three dogs.
